A Marmacs "According to Law"—Wepoing in Jall.—A young gentleman was prosecuted by a young lady before the Albany Police Cours for not having married her, as she felt that he was bound to do by all the rules of law and good morals, a few days since. The recusant gentleman was committed to jail and indicted by the Grand Jury. This repeated application of legal discipline began at length to show its effects upon the disposition of the man. On Monday he cameright up to the sticking point, and a vowed his readiness to be transformed into a married man. The police imagistrate was summoned, and in the office of the sherif, and under all the forms and solemnities of the place and the law, the two were made one. The parties are roung, intelligent and industrious, and the promise is that it will be a happy union.—Troy Whig, June 13.
